In honor of Alexander Robertson, a member of the 103d machine gun battalion ("Red Devils") of the 26th division, who served through some of the hardest battles of the war and was wounded at Xivray on the Toul sector, a celebration was held at the Toul hall Saturday night when "Scotty" was in the hands of his friends. There was the usual form of entertainment and dancing, but the feature of the evening was the presentation to "Scotty" of a handsome, solid gold Waltham watch, the presentation speech being made by William Barclay. The recipient was so surprised that he could not find words to make response but Frank G. Howland kindly volunteered for that part of the ceremony and told how pleased he knew the recipient was. Private Robertson enlisted on July 5, 1917, in Co. C of the 1st Vermont and was transferred to the 103d machine gun battalion, going into action for the first time on Feb. 6, 1918, on the Chemin des Dames front. He was wounded on June 16 at the battle of Xivray on the Toul sector, receiving shrapnel wounds in the head, on the face and in his right hand and holding a point alone when all his comrades there had been killed or wounded. For that heroism "Scotty" received the croix de guerre. He was in the hospital for two months, after which he recovered sufficiently to rejoin his unit in the Verdun sector. He also participated in other battles and, besides that, was in a railroad wreck on the way to the embarkation port when many were killed, including some St. Albans men. He was not harmed in the wreck. Private Robertson does not say much of his actions but comrades have told of his doughty courage. He is now employed as a boxer at Barclay Bros' plant, where he worked before enlisting. The command in charge of the little testimonial Saturday night was composed of Arthur W. Pirie, Frank Leith, Frank Wilson, Peter Reid, Adam Sulver, James McLeod and James Freeland.
